Trial Action in Fictional Worlds

Literary fictions allow the reader to see everyday norms and conventions, social habits of thinking and feeling, in a different light; they also allow readers to explore, in a kind of trial action in a virtual environment, the consequences of breaking and transgressing norms without having to fear sanctions in real life (Berensmeyer 79; cf. Iser).

The Player's Virtual Trial Action

For the player, this means becoming the producer of aesthetic expression, of meaning. He embarks on a virtual trial action where he can literary test systems, problems, and maybe even solutions.

- Fictional virtuality a complement to reality.

Literary Dystopia

Dystopia = the bad non-place, 'not yet'.

– a non-existent society described in considerable detail and normally located in time and space that the author intended a contemporaneous reader to view as considerably worse than the society in which that reader lived (Sargent 9).

Estrangement

cf. Booker 65; Suvin 6, 63ff., 71; Moylan 8

- A world different yet familiar.
- Defamiliarized world.
- Estranged genres: science fiction, utopia / dystopia, cyberpunk, posthuman, post-apocalypse, ...
- Playing the detective: Putting together the pieces of a cracked and distorted mirror.

Dystopia's Aesthetic Response

- Aesthetic Response:

What happens to the player!

- Gaining insight into the dystopian nature of the empirical present!
- Invitation to act, before it is too late!

This open communication triggers a change in the player's habitual dispositions, and thus the aesthetic response.

The Blank as Precondition for Communication

- Domain of the implied reader / player (on the cognitive level)
- Cognitive possibility space of literature / film / the video game.
- The blank ... designates a vacancy in the overall system of the text, the filling of which brings about an interaction of textual patterns. (Iser 182)
- They indicate that the different segments of the text are to be connected, even though the text itself does not say so. They are the unseen joints of the text, and as they mark off schemata and textual perspectives [narrator, characters, plot-threads, that marked out for the reader] from one another, they simultaneously trigger acts of ideation on the reader's part (Iser 182).

The Blank as Precondition for Communication

- Domain of the implied player
- Physical possibility space of the video game.
 - A dynamic blank space for player interaction and expression (as prestructured by the game). Physical Dynamic Blank
 - The implied player prestructures the player's physical role.
 - The player creates perspectives through filling physical blanks through action. This in turn which in turn may create additional blanks (physical and cognitive ones).
 - Basic precondition for interaction / communication between the game's dynamic system and the player.

SF and Disorientation

- Where in the world am I?
- What in the world is going on?
- What am I going to do?

Male Pilgrim: He who crossed the Delaware, with flaming sword and wings of angels...watch over me and lend me strength.

Filling in basic cognitive blanks

- The player will try to find a connection between these perspectives.
- He encounters the perspectives on his way.
- He might miss some (especially in open world games).

Thema and Horizon

As perspectives are continually interweaving and interacting, it is not possible for the reader to embrace all perspectives at once, and so the view he is involved with at any one particular moment is what constitutes for him the 'theme' (Iser 97).

This, however, always stands before the 'horizon' of the other perspective segments in which he had previously been situated (Iser 97).

Interaction between cognitive and physical blanks

- The player creates perspectives through his own actions (potential participation in the “Hunt Down the Vox” game / potential shooting of Comstock’s followers that show no resistance).
- Player is confronted by Comstock’s words (or by the unconscious dark part of his self).
- The player’s choices entail different interpretations (different fillings in of cognitive blanks).

Elizabeth: Fifty percent of everything people earn here goes right to Comstock as a tithe.

Interaction between cognitive and physical blanks

- The game specifically targets a gamist attitude, in the context of the virtual world and its critique of a capitalist consumer society.
- Targets the status quo's method of Disneyfication (comforting lies of ideology).
- The structure points to a plot of education, in which the player shall be guided from naiveté to awareness!
- And this is how the gap between virtuality and reality may be filled.

Elizabeth: There's always a lighthouse. There's always a man, there's always a city...
